Why a Traveling Man Gave Up Playing Police With Strangers. "I don't play cards with strangers," said a quiet looking man on the Pullman in response to an invitation from the drammer to join them in a little game of poker. The drummer flushed up and

"Hold on," remarked the quiet man, "and I'll explain. Sit down here a minnte or two and let me teil you."

The drummer being an obliging person

"About five years ago," began the quiet man, "I was out in the west country at a wild town, and one night, being fond of cards and a pretty fair player, I asked four or five cowboys at the tavern where I was stopping to play cards with me. I didn't know them, and they didn't know me, but they took it for granted I was all right, and they went to my room, where I had two or three decks of the fature. cards. We started the game at a quarter the ante with a $2 limit, and it wasn't long until I was winning nicely; for, as I said before. I was a good player. After some time we took another deck of cards, and as usual I had a good hand, "My winings had made my new found acquaintances rather suspicious, but as I was perfectly honest I didn't pay much attention to that. I remember very distinctly I had an ace of diamonds in my hand, and when it came around to show down I knew the pot was mine, but just as I laid down my hand the man opposite me whipped out his revolver and jabbed it into my face, and on the instant out came all the other men's guns, and I was scared almost to death. I couldn't say a word, for I thought my time had come, but nobody shot.

" 'Look here!' ejaculated the man who had first pulled his gun, applying several disagreeable epithets in addition, and he took an ace of diamonds out of his hand. This restored my consciousness somewhat, and after waiting until each man had expressed his opinion of me. and the final decision had been reached that I was to give up all I had won and probably be shot later, I got in a word.

" 'Gentlemen,' I said, 'appearances are my friends concluded I was all right. Then, to establish good fellowship firmly, I insisted on their taking their money back. They got up the drinks all around and I left them at last with a solenn vow registered that when I played poker again I must know everybody in the game, and everybody must know me. Don't you think one experience like that is enough for an honest man of quiet temperament to go through?"-Detroit by a Spanish traveler, who followed up the rays of the setting sun, and when he had reached the end of the last ray he waited until the moonbeams shone upon the earth, and there he found the opals, They are said to be very lucky stones for those who are born in the fall of the year and very unlacky for those born in the spring. Of course it is only a say-year and very unincely for those born in the spring. Of course it is only a say-ing that these are lucky or unlucky, but the rest of the story is true, as you will believe if you look in the heart of an opal and see the pink thats of the sum and the blue rays of the moon nestling in the middle of it.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Trees Is Japan Sacred to the Gods.

Near every temple in Japan are certain trees which are supposed to be peculiarly loved by the gods and to be sacred to them. Any one injuring or cansing to be injured one of them will bring down the wrath of the "kami" or godswhose particular property it is. If the trees be figured in the name of any one, the kumi avenges himself on that a swain's love has cooled, and she thinks revenge would be aweet, she makes a straw mankin and calls it by his name. If she is very vengeful, she may also make one of her hated rival. At 2 o'clock at night (called the hour of the bull) she rises, and clad in a white night-dress only, with high clogs on her feet, her hair langing foose and crowned with an iron tripod, on which three lighted candles are stuck, she proceeds to the shrine of the patron god of the family.—Sin Francisco Chronicle.

"Gentlemen,' I said, 'appearances are against me, but I am honest. I don't know how that extra nee got in the pack, but if you will look in my value there you will find a pack exactly like this one lying loose in it, and the cards must have got mixed in there. I'm sure I dadn't do it.' One of the men took the cards out of the values and ran them over, and the nee was missing. That much was in my favor, but it did not restore confidence.

"Send down stairs,' I said next, 'to the clerk and have him come up. He was playing here this afternoon.'

"Then they sent for the clerk, and he said that he and a party of friends had played with those cards during the afternoon, and farther, that they had need two packs to do some tricks with. He also stood bond for my honesty, and after an hour or so of terrific strain on mo my friends concluded I was all right.
